Customer Reviews, including Product Star Ratings, help customers to learn more about the product and decide whether it is the right product for them. To calculate the overall star rating and percentage breakdown by star, we don't use a simple average. Instead, our system considers things like how recent a review is and if the reviewer bought the item on Amazon. It also analyses reviews to verify trustworthiness. Learn more how customers reviews work on Amazon JRCALC guidelines have evolved from many locally-derived protocols to systematically-developed national clinical practice guidelines based on current best evidence. The JRCALC Guideline Development Group (JRCALC-GDG), led by Dr Simon Brown, have over the years been responsible for developing and reviewing the national clinical practice guidelines for NHS paramedics. Although the guidelines are written as an essential resource for NHS paramedics, the principles are also applicable to the work of all pre-hospital clinicians. The JRCALC guidelines are also an important part of clinical risk management and ensure uniformity in the delivery of high-quality patient care. As such, they form the basis for UK paramedic training and education. JRCALC combines expert advice with practical guidance to help paramedics in their challenging roles and supports them in providing patient care. The guidelines cover an extensive range of topics, from resuscitation, medical emergencies, trauma, obstetrics and medicines, to major incidents and staff wellbeing. The guidelines are now reviewed and updated on a rolling basis. Due to the rapidly developing evidence base and the emerging technological options for publication, the guidelines are developed, updated and made available in a variety of format options (see History & Previous Versions for more information). Working closely with the National Ambulance Service Medical Directors (NASMeD), guideline development sub-groups will develop specific guidelines that conform to the AGREE II standard. Read the Standard for Guidelines Development here. Forthcoming Updates and Ongoing Guideline Development Although the JRCALC committee lead on the writing and development of guidelines a lot of work is delivered by guideline development sub-groups, dedicated to each topic or review. The development sub-groups receive invaluable support from the Library and Knowledge Service for NHS Ambulance Services (LKS ASE). Since the JRCALC Clinical Guidelines 2019 reference book was published, a considerable amount of work has been delivered to keep guidance up to date. For more detail on the issued updates to guidance since 2019, click here. In 2022, JRCALC expect to be publish a new print edition of the guidelines containing all the updates since 2019 along with a variety of new content. Guidelines - related links: Access to the JRCALC clinical practice guidelines and other useful guideline related information is available from the links below. The Joint Royal Colleges Ambulance Liaison Committee guidelines are the essential resource for paramedics. The 2019 edition of the book has been brought up to date with the latest evidence and developments in clinical practice. JRCALC combines expert advice with practical guidance to help paramedics in their challenging roles with the overall objective of improving patient care. Key updates are: *Resuscitation and cardiac arrest. The pathophysiology of cardiac arrest, checklist use and pulseless electrical activity is discussed extensively within the context of every day out of hospital practice. A new guideline on tracheostomy and laryngectomy is included, alongside clinical skills photographs. *Consent and patient confidentiality. The guideline is brought up to date with the Data Protection Act 2018 following the General Data Protection Regulations. *Mental health presentation: crisis, distress and disordered behaviour. A reviewed guideline supports the clinician with practical help on the assessment and management of different mental health illnesses. *Major, complex and high risk incidents. A revision by the National Ambulance Resilience Unit covers poisons, rail incidents and police incapacitants. *New medicines are included: Activated charcoal, duodote and morphine sulfate for end of life care. *Other reviews and updates include: head injury, hyperventilation syndrome, stroke, respiratory illness in children and acute coronary syndrome. Bridgwater: Class Professional Publishing. CORONAVIRUS: During the current pandemic, JRCALC has suspended much of its normal work to enable members to focus on providing expert clinical care. JRCALC remains available to support NASMeD in providing expert advice to ambulance services. NHS ambulance services continue to monitor guidance and advice issued by NHS England, NICE and Public Health England to supplement existing JRCALC guidance. JRCALC is best known for the production of clinical guidelines for UK paramedics, often referred to as just the 'JRCALC guidelines'. The guidelines are produced by JRCALC for NHS ambulance service paramedics, on behalf of the Association of Ambulance Chief Executives (AACE). Working closely alongside the National Ambulance Service Medical Directors (NASMeD) who represent all UK Ambulance Services, JRCALC effectively fulfils the liaison role of its title. The committee is comprised of experts ranging across the whole spectrum of medical disciplines, including paramedics, physicians, midwives, nurses, general practitioners, pharmacists, surgeons, obstetricians, pathologists and more. Members are nominated by their respective organisations /specialities /colleges and formally convene three times a year, with the majority of the guidance review and development transpiring between meetings. See the Committee page for a list of the current JRCALC representatives. The guidelines continue to be produced by JRCALC through guideline development sub-groups. Each sub-group is made up of a multi-professional team with expert subject knowledge and pre-hospital experience and will be chaired by a JRCALC representative. For more information, see the Guidelines page. The JRCALC iCPG and JRCALC Plus apps contain the complete and most current clinical guidance. These apps are regularly updated throughout the year and should be used to inform clinical decision making. The production of guidelines involves a huge amount of goodwill from a wide range of professionals for which we are all very grateful. From the JRCALC representatives to the individuals that make up the various guideline development sub-groups, all time and knowledge is volunteered, without which the JRCALC guidelines would not be possible. JRCALC receives no central funding or government support and consequently the committee are unable to host free access to the guidelines. The Intellectual Property Rights to the guidelines are held by AACE on behalf of the NHS ambulance services, and royalties from the publishing of guidelines are used to help support the functioning of JRCALC and the development of future guidance. The Joint Royal Colleges Ambulance Liaison Committee guidelines are the essential resource for paramedics, although the principles are also applicable to the work of all pre-hospital clinicians. These JRCALC guidelines are an important part of clinical risk management and ensure uniformity in the delivery of high-quality patient care. As such, they form the basis for UK paramedic training and education. JRCALC combines expert advice with practical guidance to help paramedics in their challenging roles and supports them in providing patient care. The guidelines cover an extensive range of topics, from resuscitation, medical emergencies, trauma, obstetrics and medicines, to major incidents and staff wellbeing. The JRCALC iCPG and JRCALC Plus apps contain the complete and most current clinical guidance, with the guidelines being regularly updated throughout the year to ensure information remains up-to-date with the latest evidence and developments in clinical practice. As such, the JRCALC apps have become the defining source for clinical guidance for UK paramedics and should be used to inform clinical decision making. It is also possible to access the JRCALC apps via web versions. For the JRCALC iCPG app click here. For the JRCALC Plus app, click here. Printed Reference and Pocket Book versions In May 2021, the JRCALC Clinical Guidelines 2021 Pocket Book was published, following previous pocket-book editions in 2019, 2017, 2016, and 2013. The most recent reference edition of the JRCALC clinical guidelines was published in 2019. Following a three-year cycle, it is likely that the next reference edition will be published in 2022.
